1. Observation of legal regulations

The Federal Government does not assume guarantees for investments in connection with which project contracts, public commitments, authorisations, registrations or other advantages were obtained by a criminal offence, in particular bribery. If and when such circumstances come to their attention after assuming the guarantee, they have the right to withdraw from the guarantee or to terminate it and are released from their obligation to pay indemnification.

Among other acts, active and passive corruption of public officials (§§ 334, 332 German Penal Code (StGB)) constitute a criminal offence. Criminal liability also extends to corresponding acts by or towards public servants of a foreign country or an international organisation or a person who has been tasked with performing public duties for the foreign country or international organisation. Such persons are to this extent deemed to be equivalent to a German public official (§ 335a Par. 1 StGB). Pursuant to § 299 StGB, active and passive corruption in business transactions are also deemed to be a criminal offence (§ 299 Pars. 1, 2 StGB).

2.2 Data processing and origin of data

PwC processes your personal data for the purpose of fulfilling the tasks necessary for carrying out the application process for the assumption of guarantees for direct investments abroad as well as, when a guarantee has been assumed, for the purpose of managing it. For this, all the information contained in the application form is processed as well as all further information communicated during the application process to the parties involved in the process. The data processed includes details of enquirers, applicants, policyholders or further persons involved in the application process and/or their relevant contact persons. The personal data processed includes in particular the first and last name, contact details such as address, company position, email address and telephone number of those involved in the application process. In addition, in the case of natural persons the economic data provided by the applicant together with the application or other persons involved in the application process is processed. This includes in particular details of the economic circumstances, income and asset situation, bank data as well as professional circumstances of the applicant or other persons involved in the application process.

2.3 Purpose and legal basis of data processing

The legal basis for the processing of the personal data described above is Article 6 Par 1 (e) in conjunction with Article Art. 6 Par. 3 GDPR; such processing is necessary in order to perform a task which is in the public interest. The assumption of guarantees for direct investments abroad is a measure intended to promote economic activity using public funds. The funds for this are made available in the Federal budget and the assumption of a guarantee is made on the basis of the regulatory arrangements for this purpose laid out in the Guidelines for the Assumption of Guarantees for Direct Investments Abroad. PwC has been mandated to manage the scheme pursuant to § X. of the Guidelines for the Assumption of Guarantees for Direct Investments Abroad. Under this mandate, PwC is empowered to receive and to give declarations on behalf of the Federal Government in the application process.

Neither automated decisions nor profiling are involved.

In addition, PwC processes the personal data involved in order to fulfil its legal obligation to properly keep correct records and documentation as well as to retain such records for the periods stipulated by, among others, the provisions of tax, accounting or commercial and company law for corporations. This processing is done on the basis of Art. 6 Par. 1 lit. c) GDPR. PwC meets the legal requirements under, among others, professional, tax and commercial and company law with its record-keeping, documentation and archiving practice.

2.4 Categories of recipients of personal data

Within the framework of the application process and ongoing administration and support after a guarantee has been assumed, data will be transferred to third parties:

During the application process PwC communicates information, working results and documentation to those involved in the process, to the responsible ministries as well as to further stakeholders. Recipients can therefore in particular be the public authorities involved in the assumption of Federal guarantees (e.g. the Federal Ministry for Economic Affairs and Climate Action and the Federal Ministry of Finance) and the non-public actors involved by the Federal Government in the promotion of foreign trade. In addition to these, for instance parties involved within the framework of the guarantee relationship as well as, if an event of loss occurs, those involved in recourse or restructuring procedures or involved reinsurers may also be recipients of personal data.

In addition, PwC will also make personal data available to public authorities, courts of law or other similar bodies to the extent that PwC is required to disclose such personal data to public authorities, courts of law or other similar bodies by law or under a judicial or official order.

PwC makes use of further companies of the PwC network in the pursuance of its activities such as network-internal IT service providers who provide services for the operation, maintenance and updating of the IT systems and applications used by the companies of the PwC network. These are principally PwC IT Services Ltd. domiciled in the UK. In addition, PwC uses external service providers who make available general IT services or IT systems, which are used in the processing of every transaction conducted under the Federal Government mandate.

2.5 Period of storage

PwC will store and process your personal data as long as it is necessary for the fulfilment of the purposes described in this data privacy notice. To the extent that your personal data are the object of legally prescribed retention periods or form part of records which are subject to legally prescribed retention periods, PwC will store such data for the legally prescribed retention periods.

2.6 Your rights as a data subject

To the extent permitted by applicable data protection laws and regulations, you have the following rights vis-à-vis PwC:

The right to information: You can at any time request information from PwC on whether and what personal data is stored about you. This information will be provided to you by PwC free of charge. The right to information does not exist, or only exists to a limited extent, if and when information requiring secrecy would be disclosed by it, e.g. information covered by an obligation to professional confidentiality.

The right to rectification: If the personal data concerning you stored by PwC is incorrect or incomplete, you have the right at any time to request PwC to correct such data.

The right to erasure: You have the right to request PwC at any time to delete the personal data concerning you if and to the extent that such data is no longer needed for the purpose for which it was collected. The right to erasure does not exist to the extent that statutory obligations preclude deletion of the data concerned or its processing is necessary in order to assert, exercise or defend legal claims.

The right to restriction of processing: You have the right to request PwC to restrict the processing of personal data concerning you.

The right of data portability: Art. 20 GDPR grants you a right to data portability in as far as personal data has been provided on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or a contract concluded with them or it is processed by means of automated procedures. This right does not however exist to the extent that such data processing is carried out in order to perform a task which is in the public interest.

The right to object: If the processing of your personal data by PwC is carried out on the basis of Art. 6 Par.1 lit. f) GDPR you can object at any time to the processing by PwC.

You can assert all the rights described above towards PwC by addressing your specific request to the Data Protection Officer of PwC using the contact data given above.

2.7 The right to file a complaint with the relevant data protection authority

Pursuant to Art. 77 GDPR you have the right to file a complaint with the data protection authority if you are of the opinion that the processing of your personal data infringes the data protection regulations.

3. OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises

Attention is drawn to the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. The OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises are recommendations addressed by the member governments to multinational enterprises for responsible business conduct. They are legally non-binding, but represent the expectations of the Federal Government concerning the behaviour of German companies (in their activities in a global context).

The National Contact Point for the OECD Guidelines (NKS) can act as a non-judicial grievance mechanism if affected parties allege possible infringements of the Guidelines. The constructive participation of a company in this procedure will be taken into account when deciding whether to assume a guarantee, in particular the Federal Government reserves the right to exclude individual companies which do not respond to such allegations from the assumption of a guarantee. Further information on the OECD Guidelines, the OECD Guidance on due diligence for responsible corporate behaviour which complements them and the sector-specific guidance, as well as on the NKS, can be downloaded under <https://www.bmwi.de/Redaktion/EN/Textsammlungen/Foreign-Trade/national-contact-point-ncp.html>.

4. UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights

Reference is further made to the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, which were adopted by consensus in 2011 by the UN Human Rights Council as the globally recognized framework for the duty of governments to protect and the responsibility of companies regarding business and human rights. The central element is the duty of due diligence anchored in them for companies to respect human rights in their supply and value chains. The Federal Government has committed itself to implementing the UN Guiding Principles in Germany and passed the National Action Plan for Business and Human Rights (NAP) on 21 December 2016. The Federal Government expects that all companies will implement the duty of human rights due diligence in appropriate form in their global activities. Due regard for social sustainability and human rights is also a high priority in the promotion of foreign trade. With the NAP, the Federal Government has set itself the task of further intensifying the detailed review for investment guarantees with respect to compliance with human rights aspects in alignment with the requirements set out in greater detail in the NAP. Greater independence and visibility are being given in the audit to human rights, which were already represented as a partial aspect of the environmental and social screening procedure. Where this proves necessary, the screening process will now be augmented by a project-specific human rights due diligence.

The UN Guiding Principles can be accessed in the internet under

5. German Sustainability Code (Deutscher Nachhaltigkeitskodex (DNK))

In addition, we draw attention to the German Sustainability Code (DNK) adopted in October 2011 after a comprehensive dialogue with various stakeholders by the "Council for Sustainable Development", an advisory body set up by the Federal Government. This Code is intended to help companies in implementing the German sustainability strategy by making available to them an instrument to ensure transparency in sustainability reporting. After making a voluntary declaration of compliance companies can describe, in a structured form according to international reporting standards, to what extent they fulfil the criteria for sustainable business practice laid out in the DNK; these criteria draw among other sources on the principles of the "OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises". This encourages a better comparability of the main efforts by companies towards achieving sustainability, a factor which is important for the capital and financial markets.

The recommendations of the Council can be accessed in detail in the internet under
